

Recommended App Testing

HockeyApp

HockeyApp is the system used by campusM to distribute iOS and Android beta releases to app testers.

All testers must be invited to be a beta tester for the apps they want to test. An invitation and instructions is received via email.

Once a tester has been invited to their organization's team to test a specific app, the tester must create an account with HockeyApp and register their devices before any beta releases can be accessed.

Beta App

A beta version of the app is installed for each customer to test configuration before it is implemented in the live app.

Although this is a very useful tool for testing and developing new areas in the app, it must be noted that content cannot be copied directly from the beta app to the live app. It is recommended that configuration is tested in principle on the beta app. Once the component has been thoroughly tested, the configuration can be duplicated on the live app. The new component should be assigned to a beta App Role whilst the detail is finalised and testing completed. The new menu option can then be assigned to the appropriate App Roles and published.
